9.00AM-4.00PM

Educators, clinicians, health professionals and parents are witnessing concerning sexual behaviour trends amongst children and young people. The rise of sexting, non-consensual online and offline sexual activities and the normalisation of pornography have left our children more vulnerable to sexual abuse than ever before. Around the globe, governments, educators and health professionals are recognizing pornography as a child safety and public health issue. It is clear that we need a broader understanding so that we can address these issues in our schools and communities.

This full-day workshop will inform, equip and empower professionals to:

- Understand why pornography is a child safety and public health issue.
- Understand the impacts of pornography on the developing mind, mental health, sexual behaviours and child development.
- Respond proactively and protectively to physical and online environments.
- Gain knowledge and practical tools on how to identify children at risk and respond.
- Gain strategies to engage and equip children, youth and parents.
- Gain access to preventative and protective resources that minimise the opportunity for children and young people to be harmed.
- Discover approaches to implement safeguarding responses to prevent sexual harms and build children and young people's capacity to deal with exploitive cultural messages.
- Leave the workshop with comprehensive workshop notes, guidance for conversations and a blueprint for implementing changes in your organisation.

About Liz

Liz Walker is dedicated to culture-shifting initiatives that respond to pornography harms on children & young people.
